How to measure correctly:

If possible, have someone else do the measuring. Stand relaxed, letting your arms hang down at your sides. The tape measure must be snug against your body and, except for leg measurements, it should pass horizontally around your body.

Chest/Bust: Measure over a shirt or light sweater. Run the tape measure under the arms, over the fullest part of the chest/bust and shoulder blades, and pull it just taut enough to remove any slack.

Waist: Measure on the shirt. Please make sure that your posture is relaxed. Have the measurement taken as loosely as you want the pants to fit.

Hip: Measure over your pants at the widest part of your seat, all around your body.

Outseam: Measure on the outside of the leg – from the waistband to the sole of your shoe or boot.

Inseam: Measure inside the leg from the crotch to the sole of your shoe or boot.

As experienced riders know, what you wear when you ride is extremely important. So is finding just the right fit for your protective gear. You can become distracted by a suit that pinches, binds or flaps around in the wind while you're trying to stay focused on the road.

You don't want to compromise your comfort and protection with clothing that doesn't fit perfectly. Without properly engineered and designed riding gear, you can be without the vital protective features you need. Sleeves and pant legs can slide up and fail to protect you from cold and wet weather – or a slide across a road.

So that BMW Riders' Apparel provides the optimum protective qualities, our suits are engineered specifically for motorcycle riders. Each style is designed with the rider in mind, with a wide range of adjustments, pleats that expand and many other features to provide a comfortable fit.

When ordering BMW Riders' Apparel, don't base your order on the size you typically wear for non-motorcycle clothing. It is important that you are measured according to the guidelines provided here! For the optimum fit, there are more than 40 BMW Riders' Apparel sizes available to accommodate nearly every shape and stature.
